BRETT HUMPHRIES

Following his foundation course in art, Brett Humphries undertook a degree in Scientific and Natural History Illustration at Lancaster University. He also worked as an artist, designer and 3D sculptor for a CGI studio for six years. This rigorous training has produced an artist whose paintings are so accurate in detail that the viewer will almost believe he is gazing at the landscape in front of him, or can pick an object straight out of the still-life composition.

He comments: "Accuracy is an intrinsic part of my artwork as it plays a key role in enabling the viewer to feel they are present at the scene. I paint my landscapes in both oils and acrylics and enjoy using the different techniques that are available to me with each medium."

Humphries grew up in Devon and Cornwall, and has always been inspired by the beautiful landscapes of beaches, cliff tops, fishing villages and the high moors. He aims to capture their unique charms and character within his larger scale landscapes.

His modern approach to still life painting has resulted in some colourful compositions. The interesting subjects he has chosen to paint invite a much closer look at his exquisitely executed paintings.
